Ian Padley presents

All New Modern Papermaking

Everything you need to know about Papermaking

(An Essential Introduction for all involved in Paper!)

4th & 5th June 2024 / M6 J36 Meeting Rooms

This two-day course will provide an introduction to papermaking in the 21st Century. The course will be of relevance to any paper industry operative or supplier – no previous academic knowledge required. The course will cover all the basics: from fibres, and how they are treated and prepared; to papermachines and how they transform these fibres into the paper web. Ancillary services are also looked at in relation to papermaking, along with an introduction to finishing and converting practices.

Day One:

- History: A brief technological history of papermaking from ancient China to the modern day
- Papermaking in the UK 2023: companies, grades, challenges
- Fibres: Sources and attributes. The pulping process from forest to the papermaking furnish and an overview of the challenges of recycled fibre

Day Two:

- All about water: the vital raw material, its chemistry and an overview of effluent treatment
- The paper machine in more detail: the fourdrinier machine and developments
- The big 2 growth grades:: Board and Tissue. How these grades are so important in our modern world, and insight based on Ian's 20+ year's experience in tissue and previous assignments as a board machine start up engineer
- Finishing and Converting Processes: Making the saleable product

In addition, aspects of process control, background information on the most popular printing processes, and properties and testing of Paper & Board will also be covered. Overall, this two-day course gives new-starters an unmatched overview of the modern paper industry.

Only £775 (plus VAT) per person, including full course notes, refreshments & six months complimentary membership of PITA Member
